Now is the time for every gallant and chivalrous gentleman in Richmond between the age of 30 and 60 to rise to the moment.

Yesterday we received a letter from a person who signed herself "A Newcomer."

And in this letter, this person wants to know how she is to become acquainted with a "lonely male between 30 and 60 who would appreciate a friend and companion who is not too old, who likes to see a good show and who enjoys life generally."

Now, here is the chance for someone or other.

Isn't there a kind gentleman in the audience who will loan us a hat and a watch?

For real good, clean outdoor sport, we can't recommend too highly driving over a rough, unfamiliar, dirt, country road on a dark night.

If one has any worries, one soon loses them trying to figure out just where the road leads to.

And to increase the fun of the trip, one should be sure to pick out a road that is used by sheep. Their sharp hooves cut up the road into a fine dust that makes driving more luck than skill.

After having been stopped by small town speed cops, it is a genuine pleasure to be halted by a state traffic policeman.

Yesterday morning while driving in Stanislaus county we were stopped by a state cop for driving without a front license plate.

And after the officer had got through talking to us and had left us, we stood alongside of the road flabbergasted.

Not once did he say, "Hey you!" nor did he impress upon us that he "is upon the highway to protect the public" nor did he question our "alibi."

If some of these small town cops would take a tip from the state policemen, driving would be a pleasure and being stopped by a traffic cop would be a joy forever.

THOUSANDS IN WELCOME TO DARING PAIR
AT LANDING

CURTISS AIRPORT, N. Y., Sept. 2.—UP—Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte set down their biplane Question Mark at this field today after achieving a feat that hitherto had defied every challenger—a non-stop flight from Paris to New York.

The record-breaking craft with its record-breaking French crew rolled to a stop at 6:13 p. m. (EST) 37 hours and 18 minutes after it had soared aloft from Le Bourget to dare the perils of a north Atlantic crossing.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who first blazed the aerial trail between the two cities, made the distance in 33 hours, 29 minutes. But his was a "downhill" flight—because of the favorable winds on a voyage eastward.

Large Crowd
Coste landed his plane into a southwest wind as skillfully as he had piloted it through the barometric and magnetic danger spots which had brought other airmen to disaster or a forced stop short of their goal.

A crowd of 5000 was on hand to witness the finish of the daring adventure.

The scarlet plane, with its short under-wing and giant spreading upper wing, was in the lead of a large squadron of escorting navy craft. It appeared so suddenly from a dark cloud that an involuntary cheer arose.

Welcome Given
Lazily, the plane circled the field thrice as automobile horns and sirens shrieked their welcome above the din of human voices.

The escorting squadron dropped even further behind as the Question Mark maneuvered for a landing. It dropped down on its three points, then taxied slowly about a motor car containing field officials and rolled toward the naval hangars.

Meanwhile the crowd tried its best to break through the lines and was restrained with difficulty.

Plane Swamped

COOPER AT

Chief Cooper attended the conclave Monday and Barry was in attendance yesterday, with Cooper leading a round table discussion at the Aahmes Temple last night.

The discussion consisted principally of different phases of fire-fighting by the chiefs present, with many interesting problems being discussed.

According to Chief Cooper there are about 1500 fire chiefs from all the country west of the Rockies at the conclave.

The association consists of the districts as far north as Vancouver, B. C. and as far south as Honolulu.

The convention this year is taking the form of an educational meeting, with many prominent speakers present.

The lectures and discussions, which treat fire problems from the theoretical and scientific sides, are being conducted before the gathering by men prominent throughout the Pacific coast region for their work in the particular field in which they are speaking.

Wives of the firemen and the auxiliary members are also meeting in Oakland, many of them taking advantage yesterday of an opportunity to see the east bay from the air. Two eight-passenger planes have been made available for the air trips, which will be repeated today.

City Adopts
Midget Golf Ordinance

The ordinance requiring those who desire to establish miniature golf courses to secure a permit from the city planning commission was adopted by the city council at its meeting last night and is now effective.

In addition to this ordinance the council has under consideration another ordinance that would regulate the operation of such courses.

The ordinance will probably provide that a permit and license must be secured from the council. A license of $15 per quarter has been suggested.

Golf courses would have to close down between midnight and 7 a. m. and if the course is within 250 feet of a residence or apartment house, the closing time would be 10 P. M.

No minor under sixteen years would be permitted to play after 9 P. M. unless accompanied by parent or guardian.

The operator of the golf course would have to see that proper sanitary conditions are provided.

Radios, pianos or other musical instruments would be prohibited between 10 p. m. and 10 a. m. as well as loud or unusual noises or boisterous conduct.

If the council finally adopts the ordinance it will provide for a revocation of the permit. A violation of the provisions of the measure would entail a fine of $500 or six months in jail.

LONG SEARCH FOR PAIR
ENDED

BERKELEY, Sept. 2.—After a force of 50 college students and 150 Boy Scouts and Berkeley police had searched all day today for two children who had been missing nearly two days, Joseph Davis, of 2422 Bush street, San Pablo, found the tots while enroute home from work tonight.

The children, Ruth Hopfield, 12 and her brother George, 10, daughter and son of John J. Hopfield, University of California professor, were found nine miles from home, rolled up in a blanket preparing to spend their second night in the open.

According to Prof. Hopfield, the children left home at 6 o'clock Monday morning for a hike in the Berkeley hills, promising to return by 4 o'clock the same afternoon.

When they failed to return at the hour they had promised and night passed with no word from the young children, Hopfield became alarmed and notified police who investigated a search.

The exact destination of the pair was unknown, as the son had told his father he didn't know exactly where they were going.

The posse, numbering some 200 searchers, combed the Berkeley hills all day today in a fruitless search.

Davis, who is a member of a well-drilling crew near Orinda, was returning home from work tonight when he discovered the children, unharmed but exceedingly hungry.

The tots had but one blanket and enough food for two meals when they left Berkeley yesterday.

They had no intention of staying out, according to the father, the blankets being taken along merely to sit upon while eating.

VACAVILLE 9 DEFEATED BY LINKERS

A home run by Bill Wickesser with the bases loaded, and the perfect hitting of Jack Pinto were the principal factors in the Richmond Odd Fellows' 11 to 10 victory over the Vacaville nine at San Pablo Monday.

The Vacaville outfit battled hard to regain the top of the scoreboard, but the heavy hitting of the locals prevented them from realizing their ambition.

Doyle Taylor and Matteri alternated in the box for the Richmond nine, both hurling good ball.

MOITOA FORDS DEFEAT ALL STARS

The Moitoza Fords defeated the Colored All-Stars of Oakland by a score of 18 to 7 in a six inning game staged on the San Pablo diamond Sunday.

The game was entirely one-sided, and the Fords came through with a sensational hitting exhibition that did damage to the unfortunate Oakland athletes.

Scarl, Moitoza shortstop, did the home run stunt for the local team Sunday, while Prolo, also of the Fords, accounted for a three bagger. Anthony Moitoza and Bartoli each garnered a double.

Syd Martin, stellar Moitoza chucker, left the mound after the third inning Sunday when everything was seen to be going nicely with the Fords. His place was taken by Gray, who continued the good work in the box. Gray created a unique record by receiving four bases on balls and a free base when hit by the Oakland chucker.

More Members For Legion Squad Asked

"WANTED—Husky young men to play with the Richmond Post of the American Legion football team."

That is the cry that is being sounded by Dan "Han" Bradley, manager of the post gridiron squad which has been practicing on the Richmond Union high school field the past month.

At the practice last night, it was announced that Frank Ribbel, assistant high school coach will also serve as coach for the Legion squad and an immediate search for new material has been started.

To date there has been an average of 17 players out each Tuesday and Thursday night, but it is the intention of the manager to have two complete teams to defend the Richmond Post laurels this year.

Bradley announced that anyone who wanted to try out for the team would be given a trial, and should be at the next practice, which will be held tomorrow night at 5 o'clock.

The players have been holding only light workouts to date, but with the announcement that Ribbel will handle the coaching of the team, it is anticipated that scrimmages will start next week to prepare for the first game of the season, tentatively scheduled for Sept. 28.

Men who have been in active attendance at the practices so far this year include such players as Harry Clarke, Cliff Adcock, Milton Frazier, Bus Cooper, Ed Hurley, Jim McAllister, R. Sheehy, W. Sheehy, Herman Meyers, of last year's Richmond American Legion team; Maynard Youngs, of the 1929 Oakland American Legion team; "Babe" Peillo of the 1929 Port Bragg American Legion team; and "Toots" Hall of the 1929 Richmond Union high school varsity.

HIGH SENIORS IN PLANS FOR PICNIC

Tentative plans for a picnic of the Richmond Union High school Senior class were discussed at a meeting of the class yesterday morning at the high school.

A committee is to be appointed by the president of the class, Walter Thomas, to make arrangements for the affair.

The class gift to the school was also discussed at yesterday's meeting.

Edwin Brooks was appointed to a seat in the high school student council on the resignation of Walter Thomas to assume the duties of president of the senior class. Thomas presided at yesterday's meeting.

Chicken Born With 4 Legs

Custom Force To Be Reorganized

OGDENSBURG, N. Y.—Edward R. Norwood, former chief special agent of the Ogdensburg customs district, has been sent to San Francisco to re-organize the government's enforcement agencies on the Pacific coast. Norwood reorganized the border forces at Detroit two years ago, after which he returned to Ogdensburg.

HIGH GRIDDERS WILL MEET UNI

Cheered by their 6-0 victory over Oakland Technical High school last Friday in the first game of the season, the Richmond Union High school varsity grid-ers are now prepared to take the University High eleven down the line this Friday.

This contest will be played on the local high school gridiron at 3:45 o'clock Friday afternoon.

This game is the second to be staged on the local field. The next game in which the Richmond athletes will engage will also be played here.

The Richmond boys are especially anxious to repulse the invading University High school squad in view of the 10 to 0 defeat they suffered last year at the hands of the University team. Last year's game was the first contest won by the University High school in eight years of competition with the local varsity outfit.

University lost its first game of this season when it went down to a seven to nothing defeat before the Commerce High school warriors of San Francisco.

Man Painlessly Loses His Leg

FREMONT, Ohio.—UP—When James Bath, 61, of Bangor, Maine, was discovered lying beside a railroad track here, howling justly after a rapidly disappearing passenger train, his fingers thought him mortally hurt. Instead he was bemoaning the loss of his wooden leg. The member was sliced neatly in two, the lower end lying between the tracks.

TRACK STARTS ODD FELLOWS EARLY AT U. C.

BERKELEY, Sept. 2.—Track season may be months in the future, but Coach Walter Christie has found in 31 years of experience as coach at the University of California that it pays to start early.

Accordingly the veteran coach has issued a call for candidates for the 1931 varsity to sign up Tuesday, and fall training is to begin immediately on California oval. The appointment of Alva Ragan, freshman coach, to a full-time position aiding Christie with the yearlings and hopes that a new track will be completed in time for the California-Stanford meet at Berkeley next April coupled with plans for a cross-country meet with Southern California and U. C. I. A. distance men this fall, and pending arrangements for practice meets in November, have all stimulated interest in track. Christie expects a large turnout.

In addition to the projected cross-country meet, which would be held the morning of the California-Southern California football game in Los Angeles November 8, an interfraternity meet and competition for novice tracksters are on the program for the fall.

Christie hopes to get his men into good condition during the fall to simplify as much as possible the preparation for early season meets in the spring. He has felt that lack of early competition seriously hurt the chances of some of his men last year, and an effort is being made to schedule more early practice meets to provide the competition necessary for developing athletes for major meets in late March and early April.

SPLIT TWO CONTESTS

For the second time this season, the Richmond Odd Fellows split a double header with the Oakland Monarchs Sunday.

They were defeated in the first contest by a score of 3 to 1, and won the second game, 8 to 6.

The first game developed into a pitcher's battle, with Walt Murphy chucking for Richmond and Reid hurling for the Monarchs. Both pitchers were found for seven hits.

The second contest continued 13 innings before the lodgemen finally came out on top. In that last period, Matteri singled, Gordon sacrificed, Viano doubled and Gualdoni singled to score the winning runs.

Jack Pinto pitched for the locals until the seventh, when he was relieved by Kamb. Kamb easily held the Monarchs during the remaining six innings, allowing but three bingles.

This season's competition between the Richmond Odd Fellows and the Oakland Monarchs has attained such a measure of success and rivalry, that arrangements are being attempted for a night game between these two squads on the Oakland ball park.

The local linkers have had a sensational season this year. They have won 27 out of 34 games played, and are the champions of the Richmond City Twilight league.

BISLEY.—Major Banty, of the Indian army, scored 21 consecutive bull's eyes for a world's record of 105 points out of a possible 105, firing seven shots each on the National Rifle association's ranges from 200, 500 and 600 yards.

GRETA TALKS IN FILM AT FOX

Greta Garbo's second all talking picture, "Romance," adapted from the noted stage play by Edward Sheldon, in which Doris Keane played the starring role for a record run here and abroad, will close today at the Fox-California theater.

Clarence Brown, responsible to a great extent for the overwhelming success of Miss Garbo's initial talking vehicle, "Anna Christie" directed the play.

The story which depicts the frustrated romance of a foreign opera prima donna is laid in the picturesque setting of New York as it appeared in 1865. As is customary with Metro-Goldwyn Mayer in respect to Miss Garbo's productions, no expense was spared in equipping the picture with realistic atmosphere even to the extent of reproducing in detail an entire area of New York's historic Washington Square with its park, aristocratic mansions and other interesting details. A second spectacular setting, on which it is reported a small fortune was spent, is a replica of New York's old Academy of Music in whose antiquated halls the dramatic climax takes place. The set, constructed from floor plans and architectural prints of the once fashionable theater, provided seating space for an audience of fifteen hundred persons who witness the second act of the opera "Martha" as it was presented here some sixty-five years ago.

RICHFIELD GAS USED BY AIR RACER

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2.—Wiley Post debonair young airplane distributor and Art Goebel famous transcontinental flyer, winners respectively of first and second place in the non-stop air race to Chicago used Richfield gasoline and Richfield motor oil, it was revealed today following receipt of the news from the Windy City of the success of these two pilots.

Staging a "garrison" finish that brought the assembled crowd to its feet, four of the pilots in the event landed at the Curtiss-Reynolds airport, scene of the 1930 National Air races within minutes of each other after the 1750-mile dash across the continent from Los Angeles.

Wiley Post, entering the race as a "dark horse," negotiated the distance with his Lockheed plane in 9 hours and 9 minutes, receiving the first prize purse of $7,500 by virtue of the Victory while Art Goebel finishing second received $4,500 for his 9 hours and 21 minutes work.

The fact that Richfield products were used by Post and Goebel, winners of the non-stop race which is the major event of the National air races each year, was regarded by officials of the Richfield Oil company as another tribute to the quality of Richfield gasoline and Richfield motor oil which have to their credit hundreds of victories and records.

Both Post and Goebel were equally enthusiastic about the performance of Richfield and Richfield in their planes during the race. As Goebel expressed it, "In a flight of this kind, a pilot can't afford to take a chance with anything but the very best. My experience in the Dole-Hawkins flight which I was fortunate enough to win, and in numerous transcontinental flights in competition with other flyers and racing against time, have taught me the value of the right kind of gasoline and oil. I have used Richfield exclusively for years past—because I know that it is the finest motor fuel obtainable. As usual—both as and oil worked perfectly during this flight."

Blushing

ROBERT MONTGOMERY and Joan Crawford are the featured players in "Our Blushing Brides," which will be shown at the Fox-California theater tomorrow.

Injuries Fatal To Slide Victim

INDEPENDENCE, Sept. 2.—UP—Death today ended heroic efforts on the part of physicians and aviators to save Donald Downs, Glendale, Calif., athlete who was crushed in an avalanche in a lonely section of the high Sierra mountain range last week.

Word of the youth's death reached here tonight when a ranger came down from the tiny cabin where Downs underwent amputation of a crushed arm. Blood poisoning proved fatal to the youth, the ranger said.

Muriel Cudahy Sues For Divorce

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 2.—UP—After about a year of married life Muriel Cudahy, 20, former film actress announced tonight she planned to leave Michael Cudahy, Mrs. Cudahy said that her attorney is scheduled to go to court some time Wednesday to file a divorce suit on the grounds of cruelty and incompatibility.

FAMOUS STAR IN FILM PLAY AT FOX

What is reported to be Joan Crawford's most pretentious talking picture to date will be seen tomorrow at the Fox-California theater when Metro Goldwyn Mayer presents "Our Blushing Brides," an extremely modern drama adapted from an original story by Bess Meredyth and Edwin Justus Mayer.

Harry Beaumont who produced "Our Dancing Daughters" the picture which resulted in stardom for Miss Crawford, directed the new film, and Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian who played featured parts in the former silent picture hit will again be seen in leading roles. An imposing supporting cast includes such popular players as Robert Montgomery, John Miljan, Raymond Hackett, Hedda Hopper, Albert Conti, Edward Brophy, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Martha Sleeper, Mary Doran, Gwen Lee and Catherine Moylan.

The story concerns the respective romances of three girls who work in the same department store and who share living quarters. Fed up with the humdrum and depressing existence of alarm clocks and canned-food two of the roommates throw all caution to the winds, and when two wealthy and impetuous admirers offer them the opportunity for a more luxurious life, they accept one with the sanction of a wedding ring and the other with a promise of a marriage to come. The third, however, sticks to her standards, and as events turn out, her foresight proved only to exacerbate the first two alliances resulting in disaster. The roles are said to call for intensely dramatic performances upon the part of the principal feminine players.

TWO KILLED IN ITALY BORDER CLASHES

TRIESTE, Italy, Sept. 2.—UP—The whole Istrian peninsula as far as Trieste was aroused tonight as a result of a clash near the Jugo Slav frontier between the Italian frontier guards and members of a Slovene secret society.

Two men were killed—one on each side—reports of the fighting said, and another wounded. News of the clash spread through the rugged countryside and hereditary prejudices were fanned to fury. Romano Mole, an Italian militiaman, was killed and Giuseppe Gaminada, of the border guard was wounded. Caminada was taken to a hospital at Trieste.

Two Killed

One of the two Slavs reported involved in the shooting was killed. The other escaped into the wild Alpine hills, where it was believed possible he could hide for days without being discovered.

The Slavs were armed with revolvers and daggers. The incident occurred in the locality of San Canziano, near the Jugo-Slav border, when the Fascist patrol was passing along on routine sentry duty.

The Slavs were said here to be secret agents of a Jugo-Slav society. The patrol reported they found binoculars, maps and other documents on the body of the slain man.

Dogs On Trail

Bloodhounds were set on the trail of the man who fled into the hills. The San Canziano is famous for its rugged terrain. One of the largest caves in existence is located in that area, where a man could hide indefinitely.

Hatred, always intense along the frontier zone, rose to a high pitch as details of the clash spread through the provinces.

Police Called

The whole frontier Italian police force was called out to maintain the strictest vigilance.

Italian authorities were proceeding on the theory that the two Slavs belonged to a party which slipped over the line in order to establish connection with agitators during the trial of a group of Jugo-Slav nationalists, proceeding at Trieste.

The trial of the so-called Slovene terrorists was resumed at Trieste today, before a special military tribunal. Seven high officers of the National militia acted as judges.

Assaults and attempted murders were among the 99 crimes charged against the prisoners. They were charged with agitating along the Italian frontier in an effort to maintain hatred among those border peoples against Italy.

Representative Of Bureau Of Commerce Named

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 3.—John R. Riggelman, nationally known market analyst, has been appointed to represent the California State bureau of Commerce in Washington, D. C., according to information released today by Charles C. Bowen, chief of the bureau.

Riggelman, who for the past year has been identified with the United States department of commerce in connection with its public building and construction project, is well acquainted with California's products and marketing problems. He was for eight years an independent market counselor engaged in consulting work, in the analysis of local, national, and foreign markets for California products. Until 1927 he was partner and editor of the Riberle-Riggelman Economic Service in Los Angeles.

Riggelman has had a hand in analyzing domestic and foreign markets for most of the important agricultural, mineral, and manufactured products of the state. In many instances, he has been very closely connected with the carrying out of operation of the sales plans based upon these analyses. He has also given considerable attention to such problems as European competition in South America and far eastern markets for California products.

"Riggelman is more than a practical market analyst; he is a scientific market investigator," said Bowen. "Besides his consulting practice, for seven years he conducted classes in foreign trade from the California point of view in the University of Southern California and the University of California in Los Angeles."

His experience, information, and contacts in the nation's capital will be of immeasurable value to the bureau, Bowen said, in working out its program of sales promotion for California products.

Since Washington is the clearing center for practically all trade information, both from the several states and from foreign markets, and because any sound plan of development must rest on facts, Bowen said that a representative there to collect current market information from public, quasi-public, and private sources is not only necessary but imperative for the success of any practical market extension program.

Say "Goodbye" to this forever!

Facts published by the National Board of Fire Underwriters prove that Natural Gas is the safest fuel

The Warm-air Furnace

The warm-air furnace is an excellent means of heating, providing there is a basement in the residence or building. Furthermore, your basement stays clean.

With the Natural Gas warm-air furnace, you touch a trigger on a little electrical thermostat for warmth. The thermostat is mounted upon the wall of your living room. Think how nice this will be in the early morning—jump out of bed and touch this trigger. The thermostat automatically keeps your home at a steady, even temperature.

The modern, Warm-air Furnace brings you cleanliness and healthful heating for the entire home. All products of combustion go outdoors through the chimney without mingling with the warm air which circulates throughout your home.

Warm Air Furnace installed in your basement to meet the individual requirements of your home on very convenient terms.

Steam Heat
Steam or hot water heating is considered by many people to be the best means of heating. As you know, fine hotels and apartment houses are steam heated. The radiators, concealed or exposed, are located in each room.

But many persons believe that steam heat is impossible for small homes because a "boiler plant" requires a fireman to watch it or an expensive automatic burner. However, in any small or large home, flat, apartment house, or building, a steam or hot water system can be installed to operate without any attention—if the boiler burns Natural Gas.

Such a heating plant is controlled automatically by a thermostat which is mounted upon the wall of your living room. The thermostat keeps your home at an even temperature. The boiler can also be used to supply hot water.

No investment will give you so much heating comfort, so much cleanliness, so much freedom from care as will the gas-fired boiler. Very convenient terms can be arranged if you wish. Ask us for estimate.

The Floor Furnace

The Floor Furnace is fine for homes having no basement. One Floor Furnace will heat two or three rooms in the coldest weather. You turn a handy valve to start it. Quickly it draws the cold air off the floor and around the hot outside of the steel firebox. The cold air warms, rises and circulates. All products of combustion are vented outdoors. Completely installed for $10.00 down, and only $7.50 a month.

Heating Dealers also recommend and sell Heating Equipment that burns Natural Gas

Now Not To Take a Vacation

Once upon a time there was a girl who had been working hard for nearly a year at her office, and who felt that she was all tired out and in need of a real rest. She was so weary of taking dictation, Of attending to the files, Of doing errands and odd jobs for her boss, Of being his buffer over the telephone and in the reception room— Of warding off everyone who would bore him or bother him, Of enduring meekly his grouches and headaches and general unreasonableness, Of traveling from home to office and back on the crowded subway, Of lunching at soda fountains and in tea rooms, Of dashing into specialty shops, afterward, to buy stockings or blouses, Of helping Mother in the apartment at night, Of trying to save money from her salary while still dressing attractively,

Of—in short—the usual business life of the girl downtown.

She wasn't so tired that she had any morbid ideas of ending it all.

Or even of quitting her job for keeps; But she did look forward, with feverish anticipation, to a really restful summer holiday—

A vacation which should combine idleness and play and romance—

Sometimes it seemed to the girl that she simply couldn't wait until her traditional two weeks arrived.

However, wait she did, meanwhile making her plans—

She would go, she decided, to a certain much-advertised lake, among the hills and woods—

Surely she could find peace and quiet and relaxation there,

And lots of pleasant things to do, and the society of pleasant new friends—

Who must include plenty of members of the opposite sex—

There weren't many eligible males of her own age in her office,

So she gradually collected plenty of pretty new clothes—

Lots of sleeveless sports dresses (she had most attractive arms)—

A smart light-weight tweed coat, A dressy afternoon frock and two dear little long ones for dances, With plenty of shoes, silk stockings, hats, neckties, handkerchiefs, And an assortment of the new and comparatively inexpensive costume jewelry.

The colors of which she adored, without quite daring to wear much of it at the office.

She packed her trunk and her bag, And left for the high hopes, for the lake lake.

Where she had made a reservation for herself and her sister.

She arrived there Monday, since she had started to expect traveling in the weekend crowds.

And her first glance found piazzas that were great wide open spaces.

Pleasant green lawns, woods in the distance, the lake in the foreground—

But very few persons in sight, and of the few, many were old.

Who were near her own age and NOT of her own sex.

She felt a little dashed, but reasoned that maybe the crowd was all off on a boat-trip or a picnic.

She would be one of the merry throng next day.

After she had unpacked and settled and become acquainted.

Alas! When next day came she found that she and her sister practically comprised the whole youthful population of the hotel—

It had all the "quality" for which, in the midst of office turmoil, she had yearned—

All the quiet and considerably MORE! She could swim, for amusement—and for perhaps half an hour a day.

She could walk to the far end of the lake and hire, at a considerable expense, a canoe.

In which, unfortunately, she and her sister could paddle.

She could sit on the broad hotel piazzas and be BORED—

Also lonesome.

She stood it for all of five days, and then—

Despite the anxious promise of the hotel hostess

That the week-end would be "very gay" with lots of young men!

The girl and her sister fled home. Sure, vacation was not half over.

And she was firmly resolved not to waste another minute of it—

Traveling, at home, she organized swiftly.

A campaign to "go places and do things."

Naturally she had plenty of friends and playfellows available.

And she could and did go to lunches, dinners, shows and night clubs.

She could and did motor out to road-houses.

And dance until the wee small hours.

She could and did rush to all the neighboring beaches, day-and-evening excursions.

She could and did keep going day and night.

At the job of having a wonderful time.

Well, she had it—and then she went back to work.

With a tired feeling which hasn't left her yet.

And with the sheepish knowledge that she had returned from her vacation more exhausted than when she went away.

"I wish you'd write something for the girls who go as I did," she said to us.

"I know I was foolish, but I'm not the only one—"

"And what's the answer, anyhow?"

"I might want to take another vacation next year!"

The only answer that occurs to us is that the normal young man or woman should plan for vacation society.

As well as for vacation scenery and climate.

She wants a "eat and a change—but she also, quite normally, wants fun. If she feels too restless a spot

She will be driven by desperate boredom into too feverish gaiety somewhere else.

It's a case where the law of physics applies—

That action equals reaction.

Well, say that every girl should try to go for her holiday

To a place where she "knows the crowd"—

Or, at least, where there is a crowd for her to know—

Where there are pleasant social activities, as well as good air and quiet nights.

Where there is opportunity, in short, to have a good time

As well as a good rest—

Youth on vacation needs one exactly as much as the other.

Books and Their Colors

By Shirley Greene

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

We have had a good laugh at the newly rich person who bought her books by the yard and according to color, but how it is her turn, for buying books by the yard is the thing to do—or almost that.

Fashion has turned the tables on us and bindings are so important that if they are not more important than the contents the situation is likely to come to that—a result of the craze for ensemble effects and for the "personal touch."

Both of these are carrying far and giving women a new interest and various new occupations, such as bookbinding.

To those who are so addicted to the idea of "matching up" things about them or to whom trimness in the home is a fetish, an unbroken row of yellow books or green or red or purple on the shelves is a joy where a mixture of different colors would be merely an eyesore, contents of books notwithstanding.

And, after all, it's a laudable idea. Color schemes are given much attention.

Even pots and pans are addicted to it—why not books?

The most interesting fact in binding one's own books or having them bound to suit one's self, either of which is expensive.

Few go so far as the young countess who bequeathed a section of her skin to Flammarion for the binding on one of his books, but any skilled bookbinder will assure you that there are more people who want books bound by hand than there are binders who can do the work properly. It is an art that has lapsed with the machine age.

To give an idea of the new trend in bookbinding, there is, for example, a delightful place just opened by a princess in Paris, a very modernistic place as to furniture and fittings, where you go in, wander around as you please looking over the books arranged on the shelves and sit down finally at one of the many small tables at which tea will be served to you and where a "Miss" or a "Madame" is giving a little talk about books, quite at random and quite casually.

You are at liberty to ask questions, and you do, so interested do you become. It is proving very popular this "Little Paris" place.

In the matter of circulating libraries, a woman has turned one room of her home over to this, and not only in the country but in her city apartment is she finding the venture a profitable one. Designing and making individual bookplates is another of the current fads and interesting occupations having to do with books which women have taken up.

Book lovers who can afford it or have the ability to design them for themselves have a bookplate made which not only is made exclusive by the personal name inscribed thereon but by the design. No one else is allowed to copy it.

THINK IT OVER

By Alfalfa Smith

I AM walking down the street. Suddenly things look dark.

I wonder what is the matter. The sun has gone under a cloud.

Things quickly get bright again and the world moves on.

So it is with our minds—we grow glum and wonder why. Have we eaten something that did not agree with us?

Then again, we feel exceedingly well. We hope we may feel that way the rest of our natural lives.

Life is sunshine and shadow. BUT the sun always has come out again, so—

When Cleaning the Beds

MANY a housewife returning from a vacation will find it necessary to give her attention to the beds, especially if she lives in an apartment.

Ordinarily a bed that is thoroughly cleaned in the spring need be wiped only every three months with a cloth moistened with turpentine to keep clean. However, no set rule as to time can be given, as this depends upon surroundings and prevailing conditions.

To clean a bed thoroughly dust the springs, mattress and the bed itself, then wipe with a damp cloth. If the springs are very dirty or infested with bugs a good way to clean them is to place them in the yard on a sunny day and turn the hose on them, then let them dry. If this is not possible use hot water and a brush.

When thoroughly cleaned a reliable bedbug repellent should be applied, either with a spray or a brush. The spray will enable you to reach the liquid under cracks and crevices and especially into the springs. If you have no sprayer use an ordinary hand syringe.

There are excellent bug preventives on the market, but either kerosene or benzine will be found satisfactory repellents, and if there are bugs kerosene oil will effectively rout the pests. It must be applied four or five times at intervals of two days, then once a week as long as necessary.

Corrosive sublimate will positively destroy bedbugs, but it is a poison and must be used with caution. It may either be beaten together with white of an egg or one ounce may be added to a cup of alcohol and a cup of water.

Other People's Letters

HOW about the mail delivered at your home? Do you, as mistress of the home, assume the right to open and read this?

You may have the right to read the letters your family receive, but are you not abusing a privilege when you open any mail addressed to another? Think it over a bit.

Would it not be more considerate to permit the one to whom the mail is addressed to open it? Even the letter to her mother, which is addressed to her, should be opened by her.

Very likely hubby will hand his letter to you to read and, quite naturally, he'll be looking over the letter if you have always shown an understanding interest in your child's correspondence.

There may come a time when Mary or John will not pass certain letters to you. If you are a wise mother you will make no comments. Neither will you ever grow entirely indifferent about the letters your children receive.

For a while all went well, but one fair morning the king found one of his sons gathering his belongings together and making ready to leave the island. Shocked and dismayed he reminded the youth of what was waiting for him out there in the world, but the son did not pay heed.

"I am bored here," he said, "and boredom is worse than death. I want gaiety and joy and adventure, and if I have to pay toll to death, well so be it."

And with this he departed. After a while the second son found in a tale of silk and damask and jewels, which had been sent to him from afar, the picture of a beautiful princess, and he forthwith decided to leave the island and to seek out this woman whom he loved and desired with all the longing of his heart.

Again the king warned and begged him not to leave, but the prince, "Love is stronger than death," said the prince, "and I will gladly pay with my life if I can meet this beautiful girl, make her care for me and hold me in her arms."

And so he too left.

Then the third son heard that a great war was being fought out there in the world, and that his friends, to whom he had sworn fealty, desired his help. So he too made ready to go. And to his father's objections he only answered: "Honor is of more importance than death. I would not care to live with my word broken, my shield tarnished."

And the fourth son, who was a priest, went with him in order to console the dying and the wounded, and when the king spoke of the safety of the island he merely smiled.

"Death and danger mean nothing," he said, "when one has a duty to perform. I am sorry to grieve you, but I have to leave."

And so the son after the other forsook the island, and in the end the king was all alone. And as time went by he grew tired of the eternal safety of the island, and his heart was heavy with longing. "I am lonely," he said, "and loneliness is bitterer than death. I shall return to the world." And so he too departed to join his sons and to share in the common lot of mankind, and it seemed to him that in accepting death he tasted for the first time the sweet savor of life.

"D longest river in the world?"

"So geographers say, son—with its mighty tributary, the Missouri."

"What's a tributary?"

"A stream or river flowing into another stream or river, and contributing its waters to the stream or river it has joined."

"Isn't the Missouri larger than the Mississippi where it joins the Mississippi?"

"I think so. It is a longer stream, at any rate."

"Why isn't the Mississippi the Missouri?"

"Oh, go to bed."

FOLLIES OF FASHION

High Waistline Hides "Spare Tire" Effect

By Marguerite Barnes

WOMEN with a tendency to a roll of flesh above the hips should avoid emphasizing it by wearing a natural waistline, as shown at the left. The new adaptations of empire and Greek styles, with their definitely higher waistlines, will help to conceal that "spare tire," as the figure at the right demonstrates. The flaring skirt, with its lines converging at the waist, also helps that portion of one's anatomy to appear slenderer than it really is. The woman with too large hips should, of course, beware this extreme peplum and choose one with straighter lines.

A Tea Time Story

Copyright Press Publishing Company (New York World) 1930

A KING who considered death the worst of all evils and was constantly haunted by the fear of the inevitable, end awaiting him, had done a great service to a certain wizard and as reward he asked that he and his sons should be helped to escape the scythe of death and he permitted to live forever.

"It is much you ask," said the wizard, "and hardly in my power to grant. However, there is a certain enchanted island to which I shall transport you and your sons. Since the beginning of time death has been prohibited from entering this island, and you can dwell there in perfect safety. You and your sons can live there forever, unless you go out especially to meet death of your own free will."

"But who would be as foolish as all that," cried the king, and forthwith he ordered his sons to appear before him and to be carried with him by a powerful enchantment to the happy and mysterious island.

"So geographers say, son—with its mighty tributary, the Missouri."

"What's a tributary?"

"A stream or river flowing into another stream or river, and contributing its waters to the stream or river it has joined."

"Isn't the Missouri larger than the Mississippi where it joins the Mississippi?"

"I think so. It is a longer stream, at any rate."

"Why isn't the Mississippi the Missouri?"

"Oh, go to bed."

The Bad Loser

MR. JENKINS had invested in Wall Street, and his stocks had slumped badly. Each day he rushed into his broker's office with the same question: "What are A B C and X Y Z to-day?" Upon receiving a discouraging reply, he invariably started to rave. "A bunch of crooks and robbers, that's what they are," and thus, on and on. "Bad loser," was his broker's inveterate comment.

Good losers and bad losers are usually made in childhood. If every time baby trips, or knocks into something, mother strikes the floor or the table, saying, "bad floor" or "naughty table," baby will start the habit then and there, of blaming his mistakes on something or someone else. He will learn his first lesson in being a bad loser. We should teach even the slightest ones to take their bumps and knocks like "good sports."

When the child grows older, and begins to play games with his mother and father or "big" sister or brother, it is wise to always manage things so that he is the winner. "But he gets so disappointed, and usually cries, when he loses," many parents say. We must teach the young ones early that it is far better to play games for the fun of the playing, than merely for the sake of winning. We can give ourselves a fair handicap, and then let the child take his chances, and learn to lose like a "man."

Still later, when the youngster is enacting in competitive sports, and comes home in bad humor because he has lost his match, we can be sympathetic; but nevertheless, we should strive to make him realize that "each dog must have his day," and that a "good sport" takes his losses in the same spirit as he does his victories.

A boy's group or "gang" seldom tolerates "belly-aching," as they call it. Boys usually discipline one another into taking defeat with a stiff upper lip. And in this respect, as in every other, our example counts for much! If mother accepts the postponement of her long dreamed-of trip, with fortitude; if father hands the loving cup over to his successful rival with a chuckle, saying, "The best man wins," the children are also very likely to be good losers!

MAKING OVER FURNITURE

IN AN occasional old house there is a quaint mahogany or walnut wardrobe that usually gets relegated to the attic or basement. A housewife with imagination saw possibilities in her old-fashioned piece and did it cut in half crosswise, thus acquiring two cabinets with doors. That without a top was covered by a left from the dining room table which happily was mahogany as was the wardrobe. Each cabinet was fitted with shelves and made a book-case and a linen chest.

TELLING THE WORLD

We take pleasure in continuing today our easy home lessons for ambitious people. Each week's course is complete in itself. You do not have to be a constant reader to benefit from this series of instructions.

In fact, you do not have to be able to read at all. Many persons go to college for four years and learn nothing. Our lessons furnish the same results in half the time. Another advantage in these home lessons of ours is their economy. Correspondence school courses are expensive because the lessons have to travel by first class mail. We have slashed this overhead in half, however, as this newspaper is entered as second class matter. We offer you a chance to learn a new trade every week and to improve yourself. Today's course tells how to be a moulder of public opinion. Enter here!

HOW TO BE A MOULDER OF PUBLIC OPINION

(In one lesson—count 'em)

Writing articles for newspapers is easy. Getting them printed is where the skill comes in.

In order to be a newspaper writer, it is first necessary to obtain some sheets of blank paper. Then proceed with your writing, using pencil, pen or typewriter. Many good writers (and press agents, too) use a mimeograph, but for a beginner that is a rather difficult instrument to play.

Do not become excited because you are writing for the press. Absolute calmness is required. The only difference between newspaper and ordinary writing is that for newspapers you don't write on both sides of the paper.

Now the ideal way to mould public opinion is first to get an opinion and then keep repeating it every day. Here is the way this is done:

THIS AFTERNOON

By A. Busybean

This is being written on a fast freight, traveling from North Dakota to South Dakota, without change. What a wonderful land of ours this is! Never sell America short. Don't gamble, and don't sell America short!

Lizzie Mincus, able athlete, has just succeeded in swimming upstream over Niagara Falls. Millions marvel at her feat. Billions pay homage to her. But swimming upstream over Niagara Falls is nothing to me. If Lizzie wants to do something worth while, let her raise a family of a dozen kids. Then she'll be getting somewhere. Motherhood is the greatest game in the world. Don't gamble. But never sell motherhood short.

Seven hundred years ago Zöllini, able philosopher, said: "You can't tell the players without a scorecard." That is worth thinking about. If our statesmen in Washington would ponder on that, they would not try to join the League of Nations. The League of Nations is a bunch of crooks.

Geoffrey Nootz, able seaman, invents a gun that will shoot thirty-eight miles. How feeble this effort is. Do you realize that Japan has a secret acid that can blow up 70,000 persons at one time? If you see it in this column, it's so. Yes, one Japanese aviator with a tinblister of this liquid could destroy New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Lepprog, Wyo.,

Fliers Tested

THIS PECULIAR looking cell at Washington produces a partial vacuum which simulates conditions encountered by aviators on altitude flights.

DARING FRENCH AVIATORS LAND AT NEW YORK FIELD

here from New York and Washington, were among the first to reach the plane.

Coste and Bellonte, all smiles, looked from the little window at the advancing welcomers. Then they climbed over the side of the fuselage, a little stiff, more than a little tired, but at the end of a glorious journey.

It was a gaelic holiday. The wildly excited French hoisted their own to shoulders and marched triumphantly to a hangar in which waited many other admirers eager for a chance to cry their congratulations.

Col. Lindbergh, who knew better than any other man what this was like, sat on the hangar, smiling broadly, but waiting for the first outburst to subside before he went forward to greet his fellow fliers.

Meanwhile the third member of the heroic triumvirate—the plane—was taken to guest quarters by mechanics and at last was beneath a roof. The white question mark standing out boldly and proudly from the dark red body had been answered—affirmatively.

Rene Revoert, Coste's American manager, was first to address him. "Felicitation," he said in French, "comment ca va?" (how's everything?)

Coste pointed to his ears still encased in a flying helmet and shook his head to signify that he could not hear a word.

Even had Revoert felt like persevering, his efforts would have been wasted. For then came the deluge of "vive Coste!" "vive Bellonte!" and "vive la France!"

Lindy cheered. After Coste and Bellonte had been escorted to a reception room of the hangar amid the booming of flashlights and turned the recently falling night into a semblance of day, the French consul general had to batter his way thru the throng to join them.

Balked of its desire to view the fliers, who were then speaking words of greeting through a microphone of the National Broadcasting company, the crowd spotted Col. Lindbergh and for a time he must have thought it was Le Bourget all over again.

Police were forced to stand around him in what amounted to a solid ring to prevent his being mobbed.

ALL PARIS GOES WILD WITH JOY

PARIS, Sept. 2.—UP—Paris went wild tonight as word was flashed that Capt. Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte had landed their red Question Mark plane at Curtiss airport on Long Island.

A throng of 150,000 persons gathered at the Place De La Concorde since early in the evening when meager reports of the progress of the daring fliers were broadcast by loud speakers, began a tremendous celebration.

Six loud speakers shrieked the hoarse message. A great roar went up from thousands of throats, wild with joy. The success of the brave aviators was a success to each Frenchman.

Crowd Watches

An enterprising motion picture theater bought up the entire fourth edition of the Newspaper Paris Soir, and stamping an advertisement of a new Hollywood show on page one, distributed copies free on the boulevards.

All through the day there had been little other in the way of conversation than:

"Where are they now?"

Americans Proud

Over their cocktails, Americans in many bars applauded the achievement of Coste and Bellonte. They were as proud as the Frenchmen at the duplication, in reverse, of the feat of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Many recalled past tragedies on the difficult east-to-west north Atlantic crossing, and were afraid even late in the day to be too optimistic. The relief from the tension was a joy, and the spontaneous French literally "howled with joy."

Mrs. Bellonte burst into tears of joy on learning of the safe arrival of the Question Mark in New York. She clutched her baby daughter, and smiling through her tears cried:

"Do you know what got them across? It was really Maurice's old army kitbag. Its his mascot."

"On every flight he has made, he has carried it, and he always has succeeded. It is his only superstition and now it is finally justified."

The wife of the flier added that there was some discussion about a return flight over the Atlantic, but nothing was definite.

Mrs. Coste smiled when she learned they had landed. She had had a sleepless vigil in their apartment facing Eiffel Tower, but she smiled happily, the same confident smile as before the start at Le Bourget, yesterday morning.

"I never had the slightest doubt," she said calmly to the United Press. "If you knew my husband, you would know why. He has nerves of steel. When he makes a decision he always fulfills it."

State Bureau Of Commerce Is Praised

SACRAMENTO, Sept. 2.—That the California Bureau of Commerce will prove useful in extending markets for California products in the east and in foreign countries was the consensus of opinion of Washington authorities, according to W. R. Gage of the bureau, who returned today from the nation's capital.

The object of Gage's mission was to establish in Washington, D. C. an office of the California state bureau of commerce. John R. Riggleman of Los Angeles has been retained to direct this work.

"The market promotion work of the bureau is such that the problem may be approached most practically on a commodity basis, along which lines the bureau is being organized," Gage said. "The objectives and work of the bureau generally received commendation from Washington departmental heads, who pointed out that federal agencies are often precluded in extending services, looking to the exclusive benefit of only one state or industry. It then becomes a state's own responsibility to perform for its people certain specialized market promotion functions which federal policy does not permit."

HOG RANCH DAMAGED BY FLAMES

Fire which broke out shortly after five o'clock yesterday morning at the hog ranch operated by Harry Booth on the San Pablo Canyon highway, was brought under control by the San Pablo fire department after approximately $2500 damage was done.

Origin of the blaze was not ascertained, but authorities believe it started from a bonfire that had been burning there the night before.

Although the fire was prevented from spreading beyond a number of sheds and feed houses on the property, a truck valued at $500 was destroyed.

Special hog pens were burned but all the animals were taken to safety.

"Full Speed Ahead"

It's full speed ahead for Richmond

Led by the Chamber of Commerce, and with all community forces cooperating to a degree unequaled in any other Pacific Coast city, Richmond moves forward to its manifest destiny. Richmond is to be one of the outstanding industrial cities in the West.

Construction of the Ford plant, the Ellis Canal dredging project, the big development program of the Berkeley Waterfront Company—these and many others are signs that Richmond is indeed the "white spot" of the Coast today.

Four years ago Richmond was little known among the larger executives and business men of the state and the country. Today it is being watched as the center of tremendous developments, because Richmond has the natural advantages plus the good sense to substitute team work for pulling and hauling.

Deep water in front, a productive back country behind, plenty of good industrial land at reasonable prices, and a community spirit that helps newcomers to work out all their problems—these factors create a combination that will bring Richmond a success undreamed of today.

The Chamber of Commerce has been in the forefront among the constructive forces that have placed the city where it is now. The Chamber will continue its work, always having in mind the slogan, "Richmond—Industry's Western Goal."
